This pre-election pop-up exhibition has charged local and regional women artists to express their reactions, and reflections on the current state of our democracy, women's rights, the rule of law and then some. Open Ground Studios Director Denese Sanders and Green Chalk Contemporary Director Gail Enns are teaming up to curate an exhibition that will present an array of raw and real creative expression through collage, mixed media, painting and installation. The show aims to motivate and unite the voices of women artists and to create dialogue and incentive for action. VOTE!
